ABOUT BROWN

A leading Ivy League institution

Brown University is a leading Ivy League institution with a distinctive undergraduate academic program, a world-class faculty, outstanding graduate and medical students, and a tradition of innovative and rigorous multidisciplinary study. A commitment to diversity and intellectual freedom has remained a hallmark of the University since its establishment.

The University's mission is "to serve the community, the nation, and the world by educating and preparing students to discharge the offices of life with usefulness and reputation, through a partnership of students and teachers in a unified community known as a university-college."

Founded in 1764, Brown University was the third college in New England and the seventh in America. Established as Rhode Island College in the town of Warren, Rhode Island, the University moved to its present location on Providence's College Hill in 1770. In 1804 the University was renamed to honor a $5,000 donation from Providence merchant Nicholas Brown.

Over the years the University grew steadily, adding graduate courses in the 1880s, a women's college in 1889, a graduate school in 1927, and a medical education program in 1973 (now the Warren Alpert Medical School). The men's and women's undergraduate colleges merged in 1971.

In 2002 Brown launched a comprehensive Plan for Academic Enrichment, the University's largest investment in teaching and scholarship in its 240-year history. Under the plan, Brown is increasing the size of its faculty, adding more undergraduate classes and research opportunities, improving support for graduate and medical education, and investing in information technology and new academic space. The University also instituted a need-blind undergraduate admission policy to ensure that all worthy applicants can enroll, regardless of ability to pay.

Brown's main campus covers 146 acres, all of it within a 10-minute walk of its hub, the College Green. The University is situated on a historic residential hill overlooking downtown Providence, a city of some 175,000 people.

THE BROWN CAMPUS A "MICROCOSM OF ARCHITECTURAL STYLES"

University Hall

University Hall (C3)

The original college building, completed in 1770, this brick structure houses the offices of Brown's senior administration. It served as a dormitory through much of the 19th century. A straightforward American version of the English Georgian style, University Hall was modeled on Nassau Hall at Princeton. It is one of seven existing college buildings in the United States that predate the Revolution. In 1939 it underwent an extensive renovation and restoration, at which time it was discovered that only portions of the cupola and two large beams on the fourth floor were the original woodwork of the 1770s. The 300-pound bell within the cupola is the original.

The Perry and Marty Granoff Center for the Creative Arts

The Perry and Marty Granoff Center for the Creative Arts (B4)

The Perry and Marty Granoff Center for the Creative Arts at Brown University is a 38,815 square-foot, three-story, interdisciplinary arts center at the heart of the College Hill campus, designed by Diller Scofidio + Renfro.

Manning Hall/Chapel (C3)

Standing between Hope College and University Hall on the College Green, Manning Hall was built in 1834 as a memorial to Brown's first president, James Manning. Constructed of stone and stucco, it is an adaptation of 6th-century B.C. Greek Doric temples in Sicily and Paestum. The building houses the University's 200-seat chapel on the top floor and a satellite gallery of Brown's Haffenreffer Museum of Anthropology on the lower level.

Manning Chapel

John Hay Library

John Hay Library (C3)

Named for a Brown alumnus who was Abraham Lincoln's personal secretary and who later became Secretary of State, the John Hay Library was completed in 1910 as the University's main library. Today it houses most of the University's rare books, manuscripts, special collections, and archives.

John Carter Brown Library (C4)

The JCB Library was designed in 1904 by the firm of Shepley, Rutan, and Coolidge, and constructed of Indiana limestone. The library was built to house the priceless collection of books and maps dealing with the New World from its discovery through the 18th century, begun by John Carter Brown (1797–1874) and donated to the University by his son, John Nicholas Brown. The 15,000-square-foot Caspersen wing was added in 1990.

John Carter Brown Library

Smith-Buonanno Hall (B4)

The former Sayles Gymnasium on the Pembroke Campus received new life as the renovated and rechristened Smith-Buonanno Hall, opened in 2000. The building contains nine classrooms with room for about 400 students.

Smith-Buonanno Hall

Watson Center for Information Technology (CIT) (C4)

The Thomas J. Watson Sr. Center for Information Technology, completed in 1988, is the home of Brown's computer science department and a variety of classrooms and computing clusters for student use.

Watson Center for Information Technology (CIT)

Van Wickle Gates

Van Wickle Gates (C3)

The Van Wickle Gates, which face down College Hill toward Providence, were dedicated in 1901 after a bequest from Augustus Stout Van Wickle, class of 1876. The middle gates are opened only twice a year, swinging inward at Opening Convocation to admit new students and outward at Commencement to send off graduates.

Carrie Tower (C3)

Carrie Tower, which stands on the northwest corner of the front green at Waterman and Prospect streets, is a memorial to the granddaughter of Nicholas Brown, for whom the University is named. The tower was erected in 1904 by Carrie Brown's husband, Paul Bagnotti, of Turin, Italy. Ninety-two feet tall, the tower is inscribed "Love is strong as death."

Carrie Tower

Sidney E. Frank Hall for Life Sciences

Sidney E. Frank Hall for Life Sciences (B3)

The five-story Life Sciences Building, opened in 2006, is a $95 million research center housing more than 60 laboratories and state-of-the-art equipment. At 168,800 square feet, the building is Brown's third largest after the Rockefeller Library and Barus and Holley.

Laboratories for Molecular Medicine (E1)

Brown University's Laboratories for Molecular Medicine opened in August 2004. Once a watchband manufacturing building, the 105,000-square-foot space at 70 Ship Street was retrofitted to house 150 researchers, laboratory and administrative staff, and student research assistants.

Laboratories for Molecular Medicine

Sayles Hall

Sayles Hall (C4)

Sayles Hall, site of classes, concerts, parties, and lectures, is a memorial to William Clark Sayles, class of 1878, who died in his sophomore year. Completed in 1881, the building has a granite exterior inscribed Filio Pater Posuit and is trimmed in brownstone. At the east end of the high-ceilinged, wooden interior is a stage, backed by stained-glass windows; on the walls are pictures of past Brown presidents and other luminaries from the University's history. Sayles Hall houses the largest Hutchings Votey pipe organ in the world.

Stephen Robert '62 Campus Center (C3&4)

Dedicated in 1904, Faunce House originally was named Rockefeller Hall and extended only as far as Faunce Arch. The building was the gift of Brown parent John D. Rockefeller, who donated it "for the social and religious use of the University." Designed by McKim, Mead, and White, its most distinctive feature is its great arched window.

Stephen Robert '62 Campus Center

In the 1920s the building was expanded, thanks to a gift from John D. Rockefeller Jr., Brown class of 1897. Renovated in 2009 as Stephen Robert '62 Campus Center.

Corliss-Brackett House

Corliss-Brackett House (C3)

Built in the late 1800s and modeled after an Italian villa, the Corliss-Brackett House – home to the undergraduate Admission Office – was built as a private home between 1875 and 1882 by George Corliss, an inventor and owner of the country's largest steam-engine factory. It was the first radiantly heated house controlled by a thermostat, and it boasted one of the country's first elevators, concealed insect screens in the windows, and discreet bathrooms at the ends of corridors – one of which was accessed by means of a swinging bookshelf. The house was renovated for use by the Admission Office in 1973.

Watson Institute for International Studies (D4)

Opened in early 2002, this 56,000-square-foot building houses the Thomas J. Watson Jr. Institute for International Studies. It was designed by internationally renowned architect Rafael Viñoly and includes 70 research offices, three classrooms, a television production studio, and state-of-the-art video-conferencing facilities.

Watson Institute for International Studies

Robinson Hall

Robinson Hall (C3)

Built as the University's library in 1878, this is a splendid Venetian-Gothic structure that includes a central rotunda with an octagonal cupola. The upper floors have balconies circling the rotunda.

Whimsical carvings by James C. Brierly grace the exterior of Danvers pressed brick trimmed with sandstone. Renovated in 1989–90, the building houses the Department of Economics.

Slater Hall

Slater Hall (C3)

Built in 1879 as the University's second dormitory, Slater is a Ruskinian Gothic design by Stone and Carpenter. It remains one of Brown's most popular residence halls. Horatio Nelson Slater, a longtime University supporter, pledged $25,000 for the building if Ezekiel Gilman Robinson would assume Brown's presidency. (He did, in 1872.)
